The independent editor of Red Men had a great turn out yesterday. The procession attended over two squares and had two bands of music. Their regulars were red, blue, yellow, white, and black.

A young Scotchman's fellow was caught by one of the clerks of Sprague & Moseley attempting to replenish his wardrobe from their stock without any consideration or their consent. The clerk got into a scuffle with him, when Officer Kirkpatrick stepped in as a pacemaker and gallantly led the fellow to jail.

Washington's birthday anniversary is approaching, and there will be any appropriate celebration in our city.

Great seal of state winter dry goods, greatest underwear, gingham underlinen, and English tapistry carpet bags will be sold this morning (Tuesday) at 10 o'clock, in the auction rooms of G. M. & Co., and to which the special auctioneer of country buyers is called. A small stock of handsome high-cut ribbons will be included in the sale.

The Washington correspondent of the Detroit Tribune writes that Major Cass, who has lately returned from the Mission to Rome, has been attacked by the papal authorities, and is now in the use of a new name. He has gone on a water-cure in Switzerland, famous for the effect of its waters on the disease.

See advertisement of Mr. Benjamin, of residence for sale, in another column.

The Old Folks come not their series of concerts at the Music Temple this evening. During that night a single concert will be given at the Coliseum, and it will be remanded to a troupe as successful in drawing such a success of crowded houses, and we think they have occasion to advertise themselves with a white mask. Their masks are supplied by all the leading houses of a large number of them, having learned of a heavy charge are freight with many renunciations to those whose half life is of the scene and yellow cast, while the youthful, the quaint costume and almost indecorous, musical pieces are treated as the exercise of a few old Folks, all the old Folks do everything well, and the Folks is the principal secret of their success, a troupe more capable for the entertainment they give could not be got together.

The best and first chapter of the Folks will be professedly chaptered with Mr. and Mrs. Wallack at Matinee and Evening in the steel belt soldier, Mr. Wallack shows that artistic appreciation of character and power of delineation which make the part stand out in bold relief. There is true dignity, an innate grace of manner, and a decided sense of humor which render him the recipient of the sympathies of an audience. The unposed reading, the musical voice, and graceful bearing of Mrs. Wallack impress to the character of Broadway a taste and culture, and he declares, also, that the fort of Illinois was perfectly mounted with his artillery, and that the grand finale will be a triumph.

Preston Lopez was very bold in expressing his opinion that the Folks would not be paid.

Two men named John Kelly and Michael Lemire, in the Folks, are in critical condition. It is feared that he cannot survive the injuries.
